

Population Density Rates in Appalachia, 2000

Population density is a measure of the dispersion of people, which is calculated by dividing the 2000 census population by the 2000 land area in square miles.

People Per Square Mile

U.S. average = 79.6
Appalachian average = 115.4