

Population Density Rates in Appalachia, 1990

Population density is a measure of the dispersion of people, which is calculated by dividing the 1990 census population by the 1990 land area in square miles.

People Per Square Mile

U.S. average = 70.3
Appalachian average = 106.1